

Paul Kerensa

Comedian is booked for our conference

AWARD-WINNING Christian comedian Paul Kerensa has been added to the line-up for our Diocesan Conference this month.

Paul, who helped to write the sitcoms Miranda and Not Going Out, will be the after-dinner speaker at our conference, which happens between September 7-9 at High Leigh Conference Centre.

The chief executive of Christian Aid, Loretta Minghella, the Rev Steve Chalke, founder of the Oasis Trust, and the Rev Dr Sam Wells, from St Martin-in-the-Fields Church in London, will be the main speakers. There's also a variety of workshops on topics such as stewardship, other faiths, discipleship and vocation.

Bishop Christopher will welcome our clergy, and some of our Readers, diocesan staff and key lay leaders to the conference. The overall theme is 'Connect For', and we'll be invited to connect our theology with our daily lives in parishes, chaplaincies and workplaces.

An easier way to donate our cash

IT is a simple way to increase your parish's income – and to make it easier for worshippers to give.

The Parish Giving Scheme enables congregation members to give money via direct debit, rather than by standing order, or by putting envelopes or loose change in the collection plate. It allows worshippers to plan their giving as part of their Christian stewardship – and also gives them the chance to increase the amount they give each year, in line with inflation.

Nine parishes in our diocese have been trialling the scheme ahead of a diocesan-wide launch this autumn. And they've already seen increases in giving in just a couple of months. The average weekly gift under this scheme is £16.44 per person, rather than the diocesan average of £9.50.

The other advantage of the scheme is that the parish simply receives one monthly payment for all the Parish Giving Scheme donations, with the gift-aid tax refund already added. No longer do they have to check every envelope, account for each donation, and then apply for the tax refund.

In All Saints Church, Ryde, the parish tried the new scheme out on 10 regular givers. The amount they gave rose by 12 per cent.

PCC treasurer Randal Cross said: "It has been a great success and in September we plan to

'It's a more efficient system'

THE Parish Giving Scheme made a real difference to Jane Cobley, from All Saints, East Meon.

She signed up to give £200 a month by direct debit – and ticked the box for her donation to increase in line with inflation.

"It's a more efficient way of giving," she said. "You don't have to remember to bring your envelope to church each week. I pay most of my bills by direct debit, so this makes sense. If you create a standing order, you can leave it for several years and then realise that you haven't increased it.

"It's part of my faith to give money, time and in practical ways to help serve the Church and the community."

launch the scheme to the rest of our congregation. The biggest saving is in time for the treasurer, gift aid secretary and those checking weekly envelopes.

"Although we will continue to use weekly envelopes, we hope that a good percentage of those who use the gift aid envelopes will transfer to the scheme."

There was also a rise in giving among the 10 regular donors at All Saints Church, Gurnard, who were also trialling the scheme.

"It's certainly less work for me and for the gift aid co-ordinator," said PCC treasurer

Wendy Peskett. "All of those involved with the scheme were giving by standing order already, but this made them look at how much they were giving. The majority of them signed up to the option of an annual inflationary increase as well.

"It is so simple, and it brings us into a new era. I'll definitely suggest it to other donors in September and we'll run a stewardship campaign in October."

Training sessions by stewardship adviser Victoria James stressed that those giving to the Church need to be inspired to give, that individual churches are funded by local people, and that we need to encourage realistic and efficient giving.

The Parish Giving Scheme started in Gloucester diocese, where it released significant increases in giving for the work of the Church. Our neighbouring dioceses of Chichester and Winchester have already introduced it, and our diocese is the eighth to do so.

Among the other benefits are an improved cash flow, and the option for donors to remain anonymous. Those who give this way are given tokens that they can place in a collection plate when it is handed around.

Children perform summer show

CHILDREN were given the chance to learn some basics of acting, singing and dancing at a three-day summer school.

The youngsters came to St Simon's Church in Southsea for the sessions with youth outreach worker Babette Shaw – who has trained in musical theatre.

And the nine children also had the chance to perform in front of family and friends at the end of their summer school.

They staged an alternative version of Cinderella, as well as performing songs and choreography.

Hannah Taylor, aged 11, said: "It was really fun. I loved all the energy and the games we've done, and performing at the end."

Babette will continue to offer regular Saturday afternoon sessions for children and young people at St Simon's Church, from 2pm-4pm.

For more information, contact her via the church office on 023-9282 9440.
