Jigsaw

- The first jigsaw was a dissected map of Europe, designed in 1766 to teach people Geography.
- Jigsaws became really popular during the pandemic and companies struggled to keep up with the demand. They can while away the time when you're stuck on your own, but are much more fun as a collaborative effort, when other people spot pieces that you might have missed.
- A single jigsaw piece is not much use on its own, but put them together and you create something beautiful. Our society is all about the individual, but perhaps we're stronger and more effective when we're all linked together.
- Just as every jigsaw piece fits somewhere, though we can't always see it straight away, somewhere there's a perfect fit for you and your particular personality, skills and life experiences.
- We all have a place where we fit, have you found yours? How can you help those around you to discover theirs?
