

Lighthouse

- A lighthouse stands steady, no matter what the weather conditions are, shining its light so others can find their way safely.
- One of the most important things we can offer our children and families is consistency, regardless of the uncertainty and chaos that might be happening in the wider world.
- The calm welcome we offer, the patient explanations, the gentle encouragements and the belief that a child can succeed, even when they doubt themselves.
- This end of the school year can feel overwhelming, but we don't have to control the ocean, or carry every ship - we just need to keep shining steadily.
- The summer holidays offer us an opportunity to rest, recover and rekindle our own light - before it all starts again!

“Lighthouses don't go running all over an island looking for ships to save; they just stand there shining.” Anne Lamott
