Monopoly

- Monopoly has been voted the UK's favourite board game. It was originally invented as a warning against the evils of greed and capitalism, and everyone won as soon as the player with the least amount of money had doubled it.

- Nowadays its popularity lies in the satisfaction you get from buying as much property as possible and charging extortionate rents until everyone else is bankrupt.

- What's your definition of success? Are you planning to wipe everyone else off the board and win at all costs, or do you want to see everyone do as well as they can?

- How do you feel about the new year ahead? Are you ready to pass go and start another round?

- Do you have a strategy ready to see you through to the end of the game? How are you going to look after yourself and those around you, so you all get to the finish safe and sound?