

Weeds

- How proud are you of your garden or window box? How do you feel about the weeds that threaten to spoil your handiwork? Are you waging a war against them?
- Weeds show real determination as they push their way up through the concrete. They reach up to the sunlight and manage to flourish against all the odds.
- Sometimes our lives can feel as if we're pushing through concrete, trying to reach the light. Perhaps we can learn something from the perseverance of those seedlings that insist on growing whether we like it or not.
- We can't always choose our circumstances, but sometimes we need to make the best of things and bloom where we're planted! Don't let anyone tell you that you have to grow in a particular way or in a certain place - be who you want to be – and find the crack in the concrete where you can flourish!
